Their clothes? Their smile? Their voice? Something else?

2. Can you guess someone's personality from how they look?

Why or why not?

3. Have you ever had the wrong first impression of someone?

What happened? You can talk about a person in a book, film, or TV show.

Can you think of another example?

Helpful phrases

Review the words. Then look at each picture, listen to the audio, and click or mark the best answer. Listen again if you need to.

TASK 4 · MOVIE CASTING TEAM

The Last Call

The story

At 11:47 p.m., a journalist receives a voicemail from a person who disappeared ten years ago. The message gives one clue and says, “Don’t trust the person who finds me first.” The journalist has until morning to find out who sent the message.

Your job: You are the casting team. Choose actors for five roles from seven candidates. Two actors will not be cast.

Watch and listen to each actor. Note what you can see, what they say they do, and what personality traits you infer. The actors do not say the personality adjectives.

Trait word box

friendly · helpful · rude · impatient · quiet · talkative · confident · patient · careful · curious

You can also write another adjective. Explain your choice with evidence.

The five roles

1. Investigative Journalist
Asks direct questions, talks to many people, and keeps looking when answers are difficult.

2. Researcher
Listens closely, checks information carefully, and notices small details in clues.

3. Podcast Host
Speaks clearly and confidently, explains information, and keeps listeners interested.

4. Local Contact
Welcomes the journalist, builds trust, knows the area, and offers practical help.

5. Skeptical Witness
Stays calm, asks for proof, and does not believe a story immediately.

Use different evidence for different purposes: appearance helps identify the actor; the actor’s actions help you infer personality; role requirements help you cast the movie.
